“ Sending my deepest condolences to the family of Bernadette Quasie. Bernadette was a very kind and courageous young lady. She made the best of many circumstances including studying abroad and returning to school for her master's degree at the University of St. Francis. I was very grateful to have worked with Bernadette at the University of St. Francis in Institutional Diversity. Bernadette always wanted to give people the benefit of the doubt. She knew, well, the trauma that people often experience and the barriers that exist for people to get the treatment they need. Rest in Peace, Bernadette. Sincerely, Allison Heard

“ The long fight this mother put up to love her son. What may not have felt like love to him, or uncertain, was no doubt parents being parent. Mental health is real. Long struggle with Justin. My heart goes out to the family. Praying that healing takes place and the family that’s left behind to grieve, do it properly and seek the help you all need. Sending my love.

“ I'm sending love and light to your friends and family in this most difficult time and will continue to pray that God gives them strength to continue on! B, you were a bright light in such a dark world! Every time I spoke with you whether in person or through text, you were encouraging, uplifting and inspiring. You took on the world fearlessly and fiercely never backing down from the challenges or obstacles! You always would remind me of how great I was, but I was always in awe of how dope you were! I will miss you and always hold you close to my heart.
