“ Shannon's Pain

*Shannon, you were in so much pain finding different ways to cope.
I was encouraging you and telling you not to give up on hope.
Although sometimes you thought things were hopeless, I told you to stay focused.*

I tried every avenue to alleviate your pain.

Some days things remained the same.

You did have good days and some were really bad.

Watching you in pain, made me feel sad.

Whenever you went to the hospital, I was by your side.

You told me that I should get some sleep, but my eyes remained opened wide.

I would always rearrange my plans and was there for you.

There was no limit to the things I would do.

You were dealing with so much pain- physically and emotionally too.

I would listen to you, pray, and I would have given up my life for you.

Many people don't understand the pain you went through.

Some people don't care, nor do they want to.

They see things from other people's perspective and run with that.

I'm going to remain peaceful, although a part of me wants to go into combat.

Shannon, this poem is about you and your pain, but I won't let anyone speak against your name.

Now you're resting- pain free.

Now I just have memories of you and me.

(Love you nephew)

“ A Letter to Shannon

Shannon,

When I first held you in my arms you were the cutest baby I've ever seen.

I remember doing my homework and feeding you when I was only 18.

We had so much fun together as I watched you grow.

Every time I saw you my face would glow.

You wanted to be tall and I told you that you would be taller than me.

You definitely accomplished that effortlessly.

You were so smart and full of energy.

You knew how much I loved you and I know that you loved me too.

When I got that phone call Saturday, November 11th I didn't want it to be true.

I rushed to the hospital and sat next to you.

You were already cold and crying was the only thing I could do.

I am so broken because you were a part of me.

I know you are no longer in pain or misery.

You died so unexpectedly at only 28.

We never got a chance to have our lunch date.

We will see each other in Paradise and you won't be ill.

We will sit back, relax, and just chill.

Until then I know I have to be strong for the rest of the family.

I have so many pictures of you to look back on, so many memories.

Shannon, nephew, I will miss you.

Love always,

Your aunt Evonne
